Outlook, Pacar

Outlook Poor.

Outlook Poor.

Columbia, Princeton and Yale have the poorest prospects this year, for all three colleges have suffered materially in the loss of veterans. Columbia feels this loss most keenly, for, strangely enough, the blue and white's novice candidates never seem to be of the right calibre for a winning team. The local college has usually depended upon her veterans, and the veterans from other college teams, enrolled as graduate students at the university.

Of Columbia's 1994 'varsity eleven, not more than four or five men will be available this September. She will lose some of her most valuable players.

Yale's Prospects.

Yale, like Columbia, misses many of Yale's Prospects.

Yale, like Columbia, misses many of her ablest players of the 1904 champion team. Shevlin, end last scason and this year's captain, will have as a nucleus for his line. Tripp, right guard; Roraback, center: Flanders, substitute guard, and several prominent schoolboy players who will enter Yale this fall.

The wearers of the blue are more fortunate in the backfield, having plenty of good material for these positions. As is always the case at New Haven, Yale will have a good staff of coaches, of whom John E. Owsley will be head field coach.

whom John E. Owsiey will be head field coach.

Princeton suffers, like Yale, in the absence of several of her best line men, but makes up for it partially by retaining good material for several of the positions.

The Tigers, however, as a nucleus for a good line, have Cooney, the captain, at tackle; Dillon, left guard; Dutcher, center, and Rafferty, tackle. In the back field there are Rulon, Miller, Tenney and McCormick, who look especially promising. The Nassau eleven is fortunate in having left from last year a host of veteran substitutes, some of whom undoubtedly should develop into excellent players.

Harvard looks forward to the coming

Harvard looks forward to the coming

Harvard looks forward to the coming gridiron season with confidence, one reason being that William T, Reid, Jr., wind developed the eleven that beat Yale a few years ago, has returned to conch the crimson team. In addition, no Eastern college has brighter prospects in regard to material than Harvard. There promises to be almost a superfluity of veteran material this fall, if such a thing were possible.

Pennsylvania finds her foot-ball prospects satisfactory this year. Of the 1904 eleven, which met with only one defeat, the men will be missing, but despite this schack, the Quakers feel that with material in sight there should be no great difficulty an building up a first-class eleven. On the line will be three veterans, Lamson, Weede and Zeigler, while behind the line are Reynolds, Greene, Stevenson, Bennis and Folwell. There are also a number of good substitutes.

Cornell faces her season without complaint. It will be Gleim Wraner's second year as coach, and he is expected to do better this season than last. The Hacans lose Lynch, Smith, Bird, Dewey and Hackstaff, but of old players they have Costello, Cook, Schoelhopf, Oderkirk, Dann, Furman and Downs, for the line, and in the back field, Halffday, Glbson, Cox, Rice, Birmingham, Davis, Booth and Halstead.

Smoot, of the St. Louis aggregation, is one of the liveliest fielders in the business. He never allows anything to get by him. Smoot has a batting average that makes some of the fellows with a reputation look sick.

GOLFERS MEET ON WHITE SOX AND FOX HILLS LINKS TIGERS EACH

of United States to Be Held at Boston.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

NEW YORK, September 10.—A "try out" has the same meaning in every sport—it is the trial before a great pending competition, and this week the professional golfers about New York are to receive their try out for the open championship of the United States, that is to be held at the Myopia Hunt Club, near Boston, on September 21st and 22d. The preliminary trial is to be held at the Fox Hills Golf Club on next, Thursday and Friday. The formal little of the competition is the open championship of the Metro-open championship of the Metropolitan Golf Association.

This is the first recognition of the professionals by the Metropolitan Golf Association since its start in 1897. Practi cally the championship has been forced on the Metropolitan Golf Association by the young and enterprising Fox Hills Golf the young and enterprising Fox Hills Golf Crub. It is wrong to rebuke zeal, runs the old saw, but it is a proverb evidently unknown to the Metropolitan Golf Association delegates at the annual meeting, for they turned down the Fox Hills suggestions, good and plenty. As a final compromise, without going into details, the delegates voted to hold an open championship if a club could be found to finance the tournament. This lot in the Fox Hills committee, and the coming tournament is the result. As matters now stand, there will not be a second Metropolitan Golf Association open championship, unless another club comes forward as patron next year.

Fine Tournament.

Fine Tourname

But there is no doubt that the first open championship is to be a line tournament, although it is limited to the professionals of clubs in the Metropolitan Golf Association membership. Carls, Crosby, the young American-bern ofessional, who made the new record for the links of seventy-one at the Van Cortlandt Park tournament in July, is one of a few good men who are not eligible, as his club, the Arsdale of East Orange, is not in the Metropolitan Golf Association. As the annual dues are but $10, and there are no assessments, it seems to be somewhat of a reflection on their local pride that only fifty of the many golf clubs in the territory are covered by memplers of the Metropolitan Golf Association. Marty O'Laughlin, another youth to make a good showing in the Van Cortlandt tournament, will try again at Fox Hills, as hels employed by the Plainfield Country Club, which is a member. One of the reasons for an annual open championship is to bring forward the younger professionals, but all hopes of doing this are shattered at the go in when a club shirks the light responsibilities of the Metropolitan Golf Association membership. But there is no doubt that the first Metropolitan Golf Association membership.

There will not be more than thirty or forty professionals to compete, but as the list is headed by the thrice open champion of the United States, Will Anderson, the importance of the contest as a trial for the national event at Myopia is apparent. Should Anderson who at Fox Hills, he will go to Boston a stronger favorite than ever for the national, while whoever beats him, should this result occur, will at once become a player to be marked dangerous at Myopia. Anderson likes the Fox Hills links and won the first prize in a professional tournament held there immediately after the national open championship of 1902. This spring Anderson was unplaced in the British open championship, held at St. Andrew's, but neither he nor Aleck Smith, who was also over there, were on their game.

It is known that Smith wants to get away from chicago, but it is not certain that Donovan will and the control of the certain that Donovan will are the certain the Smoky City.

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 8, 1905

To the Editor of the Times-Disputch:
As to the work now being done with the Grafton pack, getting them in readiness for the Grafton-Middesex match, it would state that the hounds have been hard at work since the match was made last March.

In the beginning, a most careful analysis of the peculiarities of each bound was made, and through the early spring, the work consisted of work on the road. From July 15th to August 15th, they were

From July 15th to August 15th, they were hunted a little more than every other day, seventeen times in all.

As is well known, it is amost impossible to catch a fox in this country, however, one or two of them has been slightly scared. I assure you. Only twolve or fourteen days ago we ran one so hard that he ducked into Manchaug Pond, only about eight rods in front of the hounds, with the pack following and giving fongue as they crossed after him. A fermer witnessed the whole proceedings, though it was impossible for us to get down close on account of underbrush. He ran to earth about a half mile down the pond.

He ren to earth about a half mile down the pond.

Got Two Going.

The most interesting hunt we have had occurred hast Wednesday morning. We left Grafton at 3:30 A. M. and landed in Sutton at 4:30 A. M., eight miles away, walking the hounds quietly. We cast into Cedar Swamp, where, after a whirl or two, they poon had two foxes going.

"Sinner." winner of speed and driving at the Barre Trials, took one up the hill on the opposite side of the swamp, with half the pack behind. The remainder, lead by "Spić." took a cub out of the south end. Going across the swamp a half mile away, we saw a boy waving his hands. The hounds in the meanwhile had made a ring around, and had come back near the boy. When we got there the lead hound was snapping at the fox, and would have caught him if it had not been for a wall. The fox belted through a timely opening, while the dog was obliged to jump, and the fox, running parallel to the wall to a gaite, easily gaining a rod or two. This one was slightly acared, as he ran in all about fifteen minutes.

We then brought the hounds over and put them on the one in front of "Spic," who was shandling her fox in grand shape.

was half full of water, and the fox amused himself running from lussock to tussock for an hour or two. Then they straightened him out and brought him back to his home earth.

The hounds are the best that thought, time, experience and money can produce in America, and they have proved their worth at the trials of the Brunswick Fox Hound Club at Barre. This year, by invitation of the club, two of the leading hound breeders of America will net as judges—Mr. C. C. Eastham, of Film Hill, Va. and Mr. J. M. Henry, of Brookneal, Va.

Mr. C. C. Eastham is known by all as a "never say die" fox hunter of national reputation, and the Henry hounds, of which the Henry family were the importers, are the foundation rock of the American hounds to-day through "Birdsong" and "Trigs."

With swamps, ledges, ponds, thick underbrush, etc., it is absolutely impossible to keep with the hounds in New England, but by knowing all the cross-roads land, but by knowing all the cross-roads and by-paths, one may keep in touch with them from start to finish.

The Grafton hounds are to be hunted one week at Barre as a preliminary, before the Barre fox-hound trials, in the middle of September, so that as Master of the Brunswick Foxhound Club, I can find out what covers it is best to draw so as to give satisfactory sport at the trials in October.

After the trials in October, they will be taken to Pledmont and worked coupled over the different roads in the nest possible hunting country of the Valley, so that they may be accustomed to the draft.

For two couple Wadsworth paid 38 guineas ($199), whereas the price ordinarily paid is something like five guineas ($20). The hounds are to replace those lost last year by hydrophobia, which caused the death of half of Major Wadsworth's pack. Craig Wadsworth expects to go to America the last of the month for eight weeks. He will pass most of his time at Genesco. Geneseo.

On Down Grade.

Speaking of fox hunting, by the way, it is the opinion of Lord Portman, "Doyen" of masters of foxhounds, who has hunted ever since 1855, that that sport is distinctly on the down grade. Interviewed in the Badminton Missaine, Lord Portman attributes the decline to the advance of shooting interests, "Speaking for my own country, I do not hesitate to say that the sport in it is far inferior to what the sport in it is far inferior to what the was twenty-five or thirty years ago, now foxes do not make such good points. "As in the best part of my open hill country no outlying fox is allowed to live in the interest of preserving partrid ediving, and as so many of the owners and occupiers of large coverts do not shunt and close coverts to hounds in the early part of the season, it is only due to the large extent of my country that in November and Docember I am able in hint three days a week, and that with difficulty."

Lord Fitzhardings, another M. F. II., thinks hunting has much gone down owing to the large number of Ignorant, jestous people who come out now. The Duko of Beaufort is more or less in agreement with his thought. He does not see much difference between the sport of to-day compared with that of thirty years are.

WASHINGTON OARSMEN MAKING GREAT PLANS FOR NEXT YEAR.

Are Taking Much Interest in Prospect of Organization of Rowing Association in Virginia.

The board of governors of the Potomac Boat Club will neet on Wednesday next, and this matter is liable to be the chief topic discussed outside of the new building project that is new on the tapls. It can almost he stated with absolute authority that the association will give under its auspices in the summer of 1986 one of the best regatass of the year, though if they succeed in inducing the Middle States to come here, they will gladly forego the local affair for the pleasure of getting the biggest resatta of the year. But Washington will have a regatia next summer, as every interest bereabout is demanding that the affairs be kept up annually, and the association will heed the voice of the public.

One thing that will help rowing locally next year is the fact that the sport has again entered Virginia, and the prospects are bright for the formation of a Virginia rowing association, with Norfolk, Portsmouth, Richmond, Petersburg, Lynchburg, Fredericksburg and Alexandria entered. This was once a fine association, and their annual regatus attracted large crowds from this city when held at Lynchburg, Richmond, Norfolk or Alexandria, and there is no doubt that they will again do so, when reorganized. The Old Dominions, of Alexandria, have purchased a new eight-oared shell, and intend to make things hum next year, the unfortunate scellent hear their clubbouse this year causing them to give up all ideas of racing. They will shoot right at the mark and expect to challenge the Virginias early in the year for a race.
